

GLOBAL SUSTAINABLE AVIATION FORUM/COP31

Aviation's climate action: a shared responsibility

10 November, Green Zone - Convention Center, D4 (D1+D2)

11:00-14:30

Achieving net zero carbon emissions in aviation by 2050 demands coordinated action from the aviation industry and governments around the world as well as energy providers, financial institutions and international organisations. While progress is being made, scaling the solutions needed to decarbonise air transport requires the right policies and sustained investment.

This forum will bring together stakeholders from governments, international organisations and the aviation ecosystem to explore how collaboration can accelerate the sector's transition to net zero emissions. The event will provide a platform for dialogue on how the different stakeholders can work together to turn ambition into action and deliver a net zero future for air transport.
